

Michelle Rodriguez and Justice Smith Join Chris Pine in 'Dungeons & Dragons' Film

February 8, 2021

Michelle Rodriguez (Fast & Furious franchise, Widows) and Justice Smith (Jurassic World: Fallen Kingdom, Pokemon Detective Pikachu) have closed deals to star, alongside Chris Pine, in the film adaptation of Dungeons & Dragons, Hasbro's wildly-popular game franchise from Wizards of the Coast.

Hasbro/eOne and Paramount are jointly producing and financing, with eOne distributing in the UK and Canada, and Paramount distributing in the rest of the world. Jonathan Goldstein and John Francis Daley will direct and write the script based on a draft by Michael Gilio. Jeremy Latcham is producing through his deal with studio eOne, Hasbro's entertainment arm. Hasbro's chairman and CEO Brian Goldner is also producing.

Dungeons & Dragons® is a leading fantasy entertainment franchise, fueled by the imagination of storytellers around the world. More than 40 million fans have interacted with or played D&D since it was first published 46 years ago, including videogames and livestream entertainment on Twitch and YouTube.

Rodriguez is repped by David Markman and DLA Piper. Smith is repped by WME.

